THE MACQUARIE SCHOOLHOUSE PLAQUES

As with many historic buildings, the Schoolhouse is home to many plaques, to both commemorate the building itself and also remember the people involved in its history. They are a reminder of the wonderful history attached to this building.

The first plaque (above) details the building date of the Schoolhouse as well as the naming of Wilberforce. It also acknowledges the work undertaken in 1932 by the church.

The second plaque placed on the building is in memory of Edward Robert Hinder, the third schoolmaster. It gives details on his life, especially relating to the Schoolhouse. It also acknowledges his granddaughter, Eleanor Mary Hinder. This plaque was placed in 1964.

The third plaque (below) was unveiled at the 150th Anniversary of the Schoolhouse in 1970. It lists all schoolmasters and their years of service.

The final plaque acknowledges the restoration project that took place in 2000.

AMAZING GRACE - THE MOVIE

As a part of our weekend of events to celebrate the bicentennial of the Macquarie Schoolhouse, we will be screening the movie, Amazing Grace, on the night of Saturday 3 October. It is the story of the town's namesake, William Wilberforce, and his battle through the English Parliament for the abolishment of slavery. The movie is a free screening and all are welcome. There will be snacks and drinks available for purchase.

(Rated PG for mild language and thematic material involving slavery)

WILBERFORCE CEMETERY

The Wilberforce Cemetery is a part of the precinct that Governor Macquarie had detailed when he crossed the river for a second time in 1811. The first burials recorded were of James Hamilton and Joseph Ware, who drowned on 12 December 1811. The information of headstones has been made available online, with many photographs and family trees attached. For more information, visit www.austcemindex.com

SCHOOLMASTER SPOTLIGHT - JOHN BANFIELD (1887-1880)

John Banfield was born in 1842 in Morpeth, New South Wales. His parents, Thomas and Margaret, were assisted immigrants who came from Ireland to Australia in 1832. John married Sarah in Morpeth in 1865 and they had 4 children before taking up his post of schoolmaster at the Macquarie Schoolhouse. During his time in Wilberforce, they had another 2 children, before moving on. They ended up back in the Maitland district with their family. John Banfield passed away in 1927, at the age of 85.
